

MARY BALDWIN

VOL. XXXII No. 3

Spring 1994

"Being ranked the top women's college in the region is a reward for our efforts in recent years. Although this isn't our first national recognition, the National Center for Higher Education Management Systems having chosen us in 1982 as The Model Turn-around College, the U.S. News ranking is exciting because it's such a well-respected and broadly distributed magazine. Also, it reflects recognition by our peers — other college presidents.

In the mid-1970's Mary Baldwin set itself apart from other women's colleges in the South by choosing to emphasize both career preparation and the liberal arts."

Virginia L. Lester
President

"We know how special Mary Baldwin is, and it's a delight for our College to receive this exposure. An article as positive as that can only help us, especially considering U.S. News' large circulation. But I think the most important factor is quality of the academic program. What impressed me was that the presidents doing the ranking based their judgments on quality of academic courses, professors, student body, and general atmosphere of learning. Clearly, Mary Baldwin deserves the high ranking."

Rosemarie Serna
Senior Vice-President
Shearson/American Express
Chairwoman, Mary Baldwin College
Board of Trustees

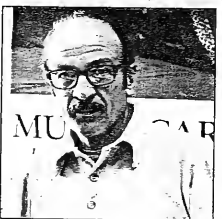

"This speaks very well for the leadership of President Lester, the staff and faculty, and of course the students. I was delighted to see this. I'm a business person and in business, we look at trends. The trends at Mary Baldwin, based on this survey and recognition from other surveys and studies, show that the trend at Mary Baldwin is absolutely in the right direction—it's up. Mary Baldwin has developed a very strong base and is moving in the right direction on all fronts."

William S. Johnson
Director of Government Programs, IBM
Washington, D.C.
Chairman, Advisory Board of Visitors,
Mary Baldwin College

"I was certainly gratified to see the College mentioned in such an advantageous way in a national publication. It is a personal evaluation by the college presidents and was not done in a systematic way covering the whole field. One thing is certainly positive: it must mean that Mary Baldwin College has been vigorously called to the national attention of other college presidents through the energy and determination of our president. This speaks favorably of her interest in promoting the name of the school."

Ulyse Desportes, Professor of Art

"It made me very proud of my college, and it made me realize the quality of my degree. To me this proves that Mary Baldwin has certainly advanced from the status of a finishing school. People see Mary Baldwin as a more attractive place to receive a college degree. The image of Mary Baldwin College will be even more improved, as Mary Baldwin will be seen as the leader of women's education in the South."

U.S. News Gives MBC High Ranking

"I'm proud to go here!"

(Editor's Note: The November magazine was almost on the press when news came about MBC's being rated in the U.S. News & World Report survey. Because we were unable to give you a full report at that time, and because of the impact of the survey, we are presenting a more in-depth article in this issue.)

When the November 28 issue of the U.S. News & World Report hit the stands in Staunton, faculty, students, and staff quickly cleared the shelves picking up copies to read about their college.

News Media

The Washington Post carried a story about the four Virginia colleges included in the survey of college presidents and quoted President Virginia Lester's remarks about MBC. Similar accounts appeared in the Richmond Times-Dispatch, the Charlottesville Daily Progress, the Harrisonburg Daily News Record, the Waynesboro News-Virginian, the Staunton Leader and other media.

The Staunton Leader, which carried the news story on page one, also wrote an editorial stating: "Stauntonians may be justly proud of the esteem with which Mary Baldwin College is held among college presidents nationwide. The results of the U.S. News survey are conclusive evidence of the outstanding college education provided here 'on the hill.'"

As the good news spread, reactions came in from across the campus, the state, and nation.

Board of Trustees

Frank C. Martin, Jr., President of Martin Research Associates, Inc. in Roanoke, Va., and a member of the MBC Board of Trustees commented, "I was very pleased that the college presidents and U.S. News took note of Mary Baldwin's accomplishments. The College will certainly benefit from the wide exposure a magazine of that stature gives. Several years ago we made the front page of the Washington Post, and now this. People are beginning to sit up and take notice."

Advisory Board of Visitors

MBC parent and a member of the College's Advisory Board of Visitors Mrs. Thomas C. Broyles responded, "Dr. Lester is really responsible for this. The things she has done since she became president are fantastic. She has taken Mary Baldwin from being just a girls' school and turned it into a real women's college. The College is preparing girls ready for careers and is still giving them a well-rounded education through its liberal arts program. I have loved telling everybody about this; it has done my heart good!"

Mrs. Broyles of Virginia Beach, Va., is the mother of MBC graduate Anne '85 and current student Susan '86.

Parent's Council

Another parent, Mrs. Robert York of Johnson City, Tenn., told us that her daughter, Jenanne, a freshman at MBC this year, brought home news of the U.S. News & World Report survey over Thanksgiving. "Since then, I've heard a lot of positive talk in our community about the survey," she said. "It has actually changed the attitudes of many people towards Mary Baldwin College."

Mrs. York, who is helping the College recruit students from her area, said she has noted an increase in student inquiries since the survey came out. "The survey is giving us positive exposure that few women's colleges are receiving nowadays," she added. Mrs. York also serves on the MBC Parent's Council.

MBC Alumni

The national acclaim that Mary Baldwin received also brought reactions from many of its alumnae. Cecil Means Turner '46 of Esquire, Va., wrote us saying, "I just discovered the report in the U.S. News & World Report and have been so excited I just had to write someone! The report was the best Christmas present for all of us."

"I subscribe to U.S. News & World Report and was very excited when I received the November 28th issue," commented Brenda Hagg '81, Washington, D.C. "I found it exciting for two reasons. The first being that U.S. News & World Report is published in Washington, D.C., and the second being that I can be identified as an MBC alum here in the D.C. job market. I think it is very beneficial in a job situation."

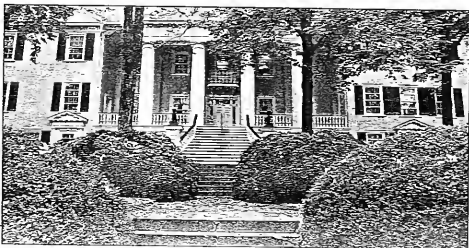

Peggy Carr '67 of Dallas, Texas said, "The results of the U.S. News & World Report 'Rating The Colleges' didn't surprise me any because I always thought we (MBC) were ranked up there all along."

Faculty

Closer to home, MBC Associate Professor of History Robert LaFleur said, "My first reaction, of course, like anyone who has spent most of a lifetime here, was euphoric delight. And of course the emotional feeling that such attention was deserved!"

Commenting on the area that the college presidents were asked to consider in rating the colleges, LaFleur said, "In academic quality: yes, high, and in some subtle ways, including flexibility and responsiveness to the larger world; —professors: devoted, hard-working; —student body: seen in really global terms, excellent. I mean the rich mix of adults, traditional, regional, community, —atmosphere: change and fiscal responsibility are often irritation, threatening, irritating; those traits are part of the atmosphere. But so too is the misdirected excitement bred by a sense of mission—that this small liberal arts professionally oriented woman's college exists for increasingly clear present and future reasons."

Alumna Barbara Allan Hite is a Award-Winning Playwright

"I can't tell you what would have happened to me if I hadn't come to Mary Baldwin," says playwright Barbara Allan Hite '58. At Mary Baldwin she met Margaret and Fletcher Collins, and it was because of them that she says she began writing plays. They encouraged her writing and produced many of her plays through the Theater Wagon Organization in Staunton, of which they are founders and chief operators.

Barbara describes Mary Baldwin in the 1950's as "a place that encouraged real thinking, where the classes were small, and the professors cared what you thought." Not having men in the classes helped her discover what she could do besides, and along with, being a wife and mother.

For twenty years Barbara has written plays, most of which portray women as realists. They highlight practical women who are protected from the intellectual's ambiguity by everyday facts of life. Her most successful play to date, "Sissy and the Baby Jesus," is a realistic treatment of the crisis point in a relationship between a black woman of retirement age and her longtime white mistress.

For "Sissy and the Baby Jesus" Barbara received the Stanley Drama Award for 1981 from Wagner College in New York. This honor carried with it a $1,000 prize. Broadway producer Jean Daisymple was the final judge in this nationally recognized competition. More recently "Sissy and the Baby Jesus" won the 1983 New Script Competition of the Actors Contemporary Ensemble, a professional theater in Charlotte, N.C. Another $1,000 award was received for this citation.

The play was given a first staged reading at the Virginia New Playwrights Retreat in 1980. In February of 1982, it was read at the Virginia Museum Theater in Richmond. Theater Wagon, Inc. of Virginia subsequently did an amateur production in May of 1982 at Mary Baldwin. The 1984-85 theater season at Mary Baldwin will feature the production of "Sissy and the Baby Jesus."

Current projects include ideas in various stages of development. Among them is a two-act play concerning the relationship of a grandfather and granddaughter, called "Nepper Mahone's Song and Dance." She is also working on a set of one-act plays, all with outdoor settings, grouped under the title "Nature Loves."

Upon graduation from Mary Baldwin in 1958, Barbara went on to receive a master's degree at Johns Hopkins University in 1961. She teaches English to ninth graders at Norfolk Catholic High School. Her husband Rick is chairman of the Humanities Division at Virginia Wesleyan College in Norfolk, teaching theater and communication. The Hites reside in Norfolk with their three children: Christopher, 21, Jonathan, 17, and Margaret (Meg), 13.

Honey English Shepperd Heads Planned Parenthood

Honey English Shepperd '63 was installed in March as president of the San Antonio affiliate of Planned Parenthood. She has served on the Board since 1980 with her work for the organization taking her to Los Angeles, New Orleans, Atlanta, and Chicago. Fund raising for the local San Antonio affiliate has been a major endeavor since 1971, with $25,000 raised last year.

Honey has a firm commitment to Planned Parenthood which has as its purpose to meet the family planning needs of the poor. She says she believes that family planning is basic to the healthy family and to the general welfare of people everywhere. The Planned Parenthood Center in San Antonio also provides sex education programs with the belief that accurate information will enable people to make wise decisions.

Active in the Junior League, Honey recently served as State Public Affairs Chairman of the Junior League of Texas and chaired the Annual Conference in San Antonio. She very much enjoys private tutoring at St. Mary's Hall, a girl's preparatory high school, and is contemplating expanding her career to include the real estate business. She also serves as an Area Coordinator for the Alumnae Admissions Program at Mary Baldwin.

She and her husband Al, an attorney in private practice, have two children, Kathryn, 17, who was born in Mexico City while the Shepperds were on assignment for the State Department, and John, 14, born in Austin, TX. The Shepperds have also lived in Washington, D.C., but hope they are now in San Antonio to stay.

Ann McGee Receives Richmond Community Service Award

Ann Peterson McGee '59 was one of five winners of the 1983 Richmond Times-Dispatch Community Service Award. Ann, director of Aerobics in Rhythm, teaches two aerobic dance classes per week for senior citizens at a retirement home in Richmond. She has helped to set up dance and exercise classes at mental hospitals, correctional institutions, and for the handicapped through her work as co-chairman of the Governor's Council on Physical Fitness. Ann is also state chairman of Dance for Heart, a fundraising effort for the American Heart Association. The Times-Dispatch Awards come to individuals who make outstanding contributions to their communities or their neighbors in the Richmond area.

As her children became independent, Ann took steps to establish a career. The Aerobics in Rhythm was a natural business endeavor that grew out of her major, music with a special interest in dance, at Mary Baldwin. She became interested in the idea of developing exercise classes for special groups, senior citizens particularly, from venturing her own parents. "Exercise isn't something you discontinue because you get older," she says, but opportunities seemed limited in Richmond. Ann's father was active, but her mother was not. Now her mother is very active in an exercise class.

At Mary Baldwin, Ann was encouraged by Gordon Page to pursue her interest in dance as well as music. Although obviously gifted in music and dance, her college years were not without some struggles. Ann remembers Miss Fannie Strauss her German class teacher, saying in frustration, "If you had as many brains in your head as in your feet, you would do very well." Ann did manage to pass her German course.

Aerobics in Rhythm, her Richmond-based company, operates in 15 cities throughout the state. Ann's oldest daughter, Marge, who graduated from Mary Baldwin in 1982 with a degree in business management, contributes to the business by managing the finances while maintaining a full-time job with Investors Bank in Richmond. Ann and husband Robert have three other children, Matt, 21; Katie, 19; Lauren, 8. They live in Goodland County outside Richmond.

Even though she teaches several regular aerobic classes each week, Ann describes the senior classes as a highlight. Although progress is sometimes slow, it is gratifying to see residents of a retirement home go from just lifting their shoulders to moving with the beat of the music. If they are willing to try, she pushes them a little further each week.

Carolyn J. Weekley Named Director of Rockefeller Folk Museum

The Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Center in Williamsburg, Va., has a new director: Carolyn J. Weekley '67. As director, Carolyn is responsible for the day to day operation of the museum, supervising the presentation and protection of Colonial Williamsburg's folk art and toy collections, and guiding the organization and preparation of three scholarly catalogues on the Center's holdings which are now in various stages of production.

Carolyn has long been associated with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation. From 1965-1969 she was editor of the Colonial Williamsburg News, and in 1979 she joined the folk art center as curator. In 1982 she became associate director of the museum.

After leaving the Foundation in 1969, Carolyn worked as curator of collections at the Museum of Early Southern Decorative Arts in Winston-Salem for five years and as curator of decorative arts at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond for three years.

Carolyn has lectured and written extensively on American painting and decorative arts. Her most recent publication is an essay, "Painting in the South From 1664 to 1790," which appears in the exhibit catalog for a Virginia Museum traveling exhibit for which she was one of five curators.

Carolyn credits several Mary Baldwin faculty and staff with giving her support and guidance during her years as an art major who have helped her develop professionally. Former Deans Martha Grafton and Elizabeth Parker and former Professors Gordon Page and Fletcher Collins were very supportive, she says. She also cites the late Dr. Miller and current professor of art Ulysses Desportes as significant mentors who provided encouragement and believed that she belonged and would succeed to art studies.

Stbourne itself made an impression on Carolyn, a native of Gloucester, a factor which she says she did not fully realize until much later. The Shenandoah Valley is rich with folk customs and crafts which spilled over into and enriched her college life in subtle ways, such as a cider press on Apple Day and the local porters' ware in the College bookstore. These experiences as well as basic interests and concepts formed at Mary Baldwin were ultimately refined into her concentration on American art and now American folk art.

Alumna Anne Ponder Dickson '61 has donated to the College her collection of works by the late playwright Tennessee Williams. The gift honors Fletcher Collins, drama scholar, author, and retired faculty member. (See story below.)

"The Glass Menagerie" under Glass At Mary Baldwin College

Literary scholars from near and far will be coming to Mary Baldwin College to view the new collection of original playscripts and limited edition publications by Tennessee Williams.

The gift was given by Anne Ponder Dickson '61 of Dallas, Texas in honor of Fletcher Collins, the drama scholar and author who taught at the College for over three decades. Collins called the Williams materials "a foundation for a research collection that might bring Williams scholars to Mary Baldwin from all over."

Among the six original typescripts donated to MBC, "The Glass Menagerie," is the most famous. In the play, Williams memorializes his sister Rose and the consolation she sought from the dismal and distressing life in a St. Louis apartment through her preoccupation with her collection of glass animals. This reflects the fact that although Williams' plays were not intentionally autobiographical, they are all intensely personal.

MBC also has typescripts for "The Rose Tattoo," "Sweet Bird of Youth," "Summer and Smoke," "Orpheus Descending," and "You Touch Me." The typescripts and the 22 limited edition publications, including twelve first editions, four autographed editions and one cloth edition of plays by Williams were Anne Ponder Dickson's personal collection. She gave them to the College in response to the College's request for alumnae for donations for the new Denning Fine Arts Center in Fletcher Collins' name. Part of the collection was displayed in Denning Hall during the Dedication Weekend in October.

Born on March 26, 1911, in Mississippi as Thomas Lanier Williams, the playwright was the son of Edwin Dakin, the daughter of an Episcopal cleric, and Cornelia Coffin, a violent and aggressive traveling salesman. He studied at the University of Missouri and received a bachelor's degree from the University of Iowa.

The donor, Anne Dickson, president of the Texas publishing house, Pressworks, has been an active MBC alumna. She served on the MBC Advisory Board of Visitors and has served on the Board of Trustees since 1979. She is currently serving on the College's institutional planning committee to study the future of Mary Baldwin.

She ventured into the publishing industry a few years ago. Under her management, the once faltering publishing company has been rejuvenated.

Pressworks is the only trade publishing house for modern American literature. The half-dozen titles Dickson publishes each year reflect her interest in first-time and Texas writers. She has published works by such nationally prominent authors as Joyce Carol Oates, Robert Penn Warren, Donald Barthelme, and Stanley Elkin.

Dickson, who feels Williams was "one of the greatest dramatists of the century," bought the Williams materials in 1980 from the University of Texas collection at the Humanities Research Center there. Williams gave many of his manuscripts and letters to the University, making the Williams Library there the largest next to Harvard's. The materials became even more valuable upon Williams' death last February.

Fletcher Collins was head of the MBC drama department and produced several of Williams' plays when Dickson studied under him. He retired in 1977 after 31 years at MBC. He is still very active in the arts at the College and in the community. The Oak Grove Theater, which he and his wife, Margaret, began in 1953, still operates each summer. He has been involved with Theater Wagon, the semi-professional company which travels and presents new plays and translations. Collins is a noted scholar of medieval theater and music.

Collins was recognized and honored in 1981 with the Virginia Cultural Award, for which he carries the title Laureate of Virginia. The studio theater in Denning Hall was named and dedicated the Fletcher Collins Theatre in appreciation of Collins' dedication to drama and to the College.

Dickson's gift of Williams' typescripts and publications in Collins' name are housed in the Reigner Room of the Griffin Library.

"I believe in the might of design... and the message of art," Tennessee Williams once said. Anne Ponder Dickson and Fletcher Collins have helped to bring that message to MBC.

Alumnae Admissions Program Off and Running

The Mary Baldwin Alumnae Admissions Program got off to a strong start this year with thirty-one volunteer Area Coordinators taking leadership roles in twenty-three cities in eleven states. These volunteers are helping to assist the Admissions Office in attracting and selecting a highly qualified freshman class for fall 1984. The Area Coordinators met on campus last fall during the Alumnae Leadership Conference for a training workshop. Participants toured the campus, met with faculty to learn more about current programs, interacted with students, and received instruction regarding their contact with students.

Alumnae provide the unique service of offering to prospective students personal, local contact with Mary Baldwin. This contact often makes the difference in a student's decision to attend. During the fall, Area Coordinators telephoned interested students in their cities to answer questions and offer assistance. This year, they are calling to congratulate accepted applicants. All year long they watch the newspapers and read outstanding young women to the Admissions Office. They have opened their homes for prospective student receptions and for overnight stays by Admissions Counselors. They talk about Mary Baldwin in their church, business, school, and social circles.

Recruitment activities have not been limited to Area Coordinators. All alumnae were invited to nominate outstanding high school students for admission to Mary Baldwin through the Alumnae Nomination Program. A record number of 138 nominations were received during this third year of program operation. Alumnae from all over the country volunteered to represent Mary Baldwin at local college night programs when Admissions Counselors could not attend.

Alumnae are also helping with interviewing applicants for admission who have not visited the campus for an interview with an Admissions Counselor. Alumnae were asked to evaluate the non-academic strengths and achievements of these high school seniors and report to the Admissions Office in an effort to select the very best freshman class.

Listed below are the Admissions Area Coordinators. Of course many more alumnae have been active in recruitment this year.

Students on the Job Bridge Gap Between Classroom and Work

MBC student Maryann Kirk '86 says working at WKDQ-WSGM Radio in Staunton, Va. has been a rewarding experience. This externship program through the College has given Miss Kirk a chance to explore the communications field, to gain valuable career experience and to "test" her academic preparation before graduation.

The externship program is both academic and career related. Students work and gain experience in their field while also having a learning experience, explains Diane Kent, director of career services at MBC. Students can design their externships to meet their academic and career needs.

Students are able to complete externships during the fall and spring semesters, May term, and in the summer. Externships are offered throughout the country with a variety of organizations. Students are awarded academic credit for their externships once they have met the academic guidelines established by their supervisory professor.

An extern can be "on the job" anywhere from Staunton, Va. to Amsterdam or Costa Rica. Among the states in which students have held externships are New York, New Jersey, Alabama, Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Florida, as well as several cities in Virginia and West Virginia.

Brooke Wallace

Maryann Kirk

Some examples of recent externships for MBC students include: three at the Shenandoah Virginia Town and Country magazine in Staunton, Va.; Kathy Switzer, advertising and sales; Brooke Wallace, graphic; and Catherine Deval Wood, editorial assistant; Stephanie Tompkins, teacher of English and arts and crafts in Costa Rica; and Sandy Harrison, public relations assistant at King's Daughters' Hospital in Staunton, Va.

Sandy Harrison, a junior from Charleston, W. Va. said, "My externship confirmed to me that I want to enter the field of public relations. Having the experience during my sophomore year helped me to better choose courses for my last two years. I am now more aware of my strengths and weaknesses."

Stephanie Tompkins, a former student from Richmond, Va. commented, "My externship in Costa Rica gave me the opportunity to use both fluent Spanish and English on a daily basis. I even had the chance to use my Japanese. Most importantly, I helped other people while helping myself grasp a better knowledge of the social and political structure of Latin America and its people."

challenge Grant

Spurs Annual Fund Increase

In September 1983 a $50,000 Challenge Grant was established. The Challenge, designed to stimulate increased giving and participation, was extremely helpful during the 1983-1984 phonathon. Alumnae callers received positive support from donors. Alumnae and parents responded to the Challenge with nearly 900 contributions increasing their gift, giving for the first time or giving after missing a year or two, for a total of $23,500 pledged toward the Challenge during the last 12 evenings of calling.

The 1983-1984 phonathon success is due to the $50,000 Challenge Grant, the wonderful news in the November 28, 1983 issue of U.S. News and World Report announcing Mary Baldwin College is the top women's college in the South and the 100 outstanding alumnae who volunteered to be callers. Mary Baldwin College is grateful to these alumnae.

At the September 22, 23, 24, 1983 on campus meeting of the Advisory Board of Visitors twenty members of the Class of 1983 of the ABV were officially welcomed and oriented to Mary Baldwin College.

Six members were returning to the ABV for a second term: Mr. Eric Hietner, Charlottesville, Virginia; Mr. William S. Johnson, Chairperson of the ABV, Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Ashton Mitchell, Richmond, Virginia; Mrs. Julia Williams, Richmond, Virginia, and Mr. Raymond Woolfingdale of Dallas, Texas.

Alumnae Association Constitution

A special committee was appointed by the Alumnae Association Board of Directors to study the Constitution and Bylaws at the fall meeting of the Board. This self-study will be required a minimum of every five years by the Alumnae Association Constitution.

Several changes are being recommended by the committee. The Cockle Committee, an ad hoc committee started in 1975 to handle the publishing and promotion of From Ham to Jam, is being expanded to handle all fundraising projects of the Association. With this change in responsibilities, the name of the committee will also be changed to the Finance Committee. The Finance Committee will also handle the development and supervision of the annual association projects, including the Alumnae Association Scholarship, monitoring the Chapter Loan Fund and handling any other financially related duties as assigned by the Executive Committee.

The new Fundraising Committee will be a standing committee chaired by the Vice-President for Finance.

The Continuing Education Committee will remain a standing committee, but will be appointed by the committee with the help of the Director of Alumnae Activities.

The establishment of a new standing committee, the Homecoming Activities Committee, is also being recommended. This committee, which is also appointed by the President with the help of the Director of Alumnae Activities, will be responsible for planning and evaluating Homecoming activities.

The constitutional revisions have been approved by the Board of Directors and will be presented for final approval at the National Alumnae Association meeting on Saturday, June 2, 1984.

Message from the Alumnae Association President

Dear Alumnae,

During the last several years I have had the opportunity to work actively in the Alumnae Association in a variety of roles. This privilege has allowed me to develop a unique appreciation for the College. My visits to the campus have inspired a bit of jealousy for those who are currently enrolled.

Certainly the views are no more (or less) beautiful than any of us recall from our days as students. However, the campus boasts the recent addition of a Fine Arts Center, Alumnae House complete with accommodations for special College guests, and a Wells Fargo Fitness Jogging Course.

Programs and majors at the College have grown, in recent history, to include communications, computer science, and business management; all the while maintaining the liberal arts emphasis. Visiting guests include those renowned in the arts as well as business.

We have so many things to take pride in at Mary Baldwin. The College, faculty, and Dr. Lester have received much deserved recognition recently. A November issue of U.S. News and World Report cited MBC's excellence as a liberal arts college in the South based on a survey of over 600 college presidents. The National Center for Higher Education Management Systems selected MBC as the model college with respect to "turn around management strategies." Dr. David Riesman is citing MBC for its book on effective presidential leadership. Dr. Lester has been appointed by Governor Robb to the Commission to Study the Future of Virginia. And there is more — but to chronicle them all would take this nothing more than a lengthy list.

The high energy level so evident on campus is also present in your Alumnae Association. At the fall Alumnae Leadership Conference, over 45 alumnae met on campus to plan Association, chapter, admissions, fundraising, and reunion activities for the year. The enthusiasm and plans generated during that weekend were very exciting.

The Alumnae Association has succeeded in extending activities and news of the College to more alumnae through a much expanded network of chapters. The number of alumnae has increased dramatically! We are working with the Admissions Office to seek out excellent high school students as potential candidates. We have begun to develop a financial plan of action to increase our ability to fund support College functions! This year for the first time a scholarship was awarded by the Association. The first recipient is a senior sociology major, Amy Maze, from Moss Point, Mississippi. This award will be made annually and involves a campus job in the Alumnae Activities Office. We have organized our goals in terms of contributions we can make to the College, contributions we can make to one another, contributions to the current student body, and contributions to students yet to come! Mary Baldwin is a very exciting place to devote one's volunteer energies! As an alumna, it is most gratifying to see and experience the dedication and commitment of the other Board members and volunteers throughout the country.

I am looking forward to Homecoming 1984. It is special for me as it is my class's twenty-year anniversary. This year is a scheduled reunion for you or not, I encourage one and all to return to campus during Homecoming to catch the spirit of the College which is ready to meet the needs of the preparation of women in a liberal arts setting. It is beautiful!

Sincerely,

Susan B. Homar

HOMEcoming-COMMENCEMENT 1984

Grads and Alums to Join In First Combined Homecoming-Commencement

Dr. James D. Lott leads the Commencement procession.

Two of the College's most important events — Alumnae Homecoming and Commencement — will be celebrated for the first time on the same weekend. There also will be a number of other "firsts" during the activities scheduled for June 1-3, 1984, which include residence hall housing for alumnae, new reunion celebrations, and a children's program.

The combination of Homecoming and Commencement Weekends provides the opportunity for more interaction between alumnae and students and a number of new offerings for both groups.

The Offices of Alumnae Activities and the Dean of Students with the officers of the Senior Class have been working closely together since August planning the weekend. Key Commencement events include the Class of 1984 Dinner on Friday, the Commencement Ball on Saturday evening, and Commencement exercises on Sunday. Members of the Class of 1984 and their guests will also be invited to attend Alumnae College seminars, the Alumnae Parade with the Class of 1984, the Alumnae Picnic and to participate in any of the activities scheduled for Saturday afternoon.

Alumnae will enjoy a wine and cheese party and dinner with friends and current faculty on Friday, and on Saturday the Alumnae Parade, the National Alumnae Association meeting, President Lester's reception and dinner, and class parties are scheduled.

Alumnae College seminars are being sponsored again by the Continuing Education Committee of the Alumnae Association Board of Directors. Three seminars will be presented Saturday morning with alumnae and guests having a choice of attending two of the three sessions:

"Investment Strategies for the Eighties," a panel discussion by investment representatives from several fields, will address topics such as balancing risk and safety, deciding on long-term growth or short-term yields, and the effect of your tax bracket on your choice of investments.

Robert Allen will lead a discussion on "American Music of the Forties" which will cover trends and styles of popular music and musical theatre, as well as how music reflects the attitudes of this period in our history. Mr. Allen, an MBC instructor in music, will also provide piano accompaniment with his lecture. Mr. Allen holds graduate degrees in music from the University of North Carolina and Cornell University and is also a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Michigan.

The third Alumnae College choice is "Mary Baldwin Keepsakes," a lecture and slide presentation on women in the history of the College. Dr. Kenneth W. Keller, who is an associate professor of history and is working with the development of the college archives, will lead the seminar. Dr. Keller holds a doctoral degree from Yale University.

Alumnae are welcome to attend Commencement exercises Sunday morning, weather permitting. In the event of inclement weather, only ticket holders will be admitted to the exercises.

This year's Commencement speaker is Dr. Jane Croshaw, professor of religion at Mount Holyoke College in South Hadley, Mass.

Cheryl Garrett '84, president of the Senior Class, commented, "I am looking forward to the combined weekend. The new opportunities and chances that will be offered as a part of our graduation celebration will make it an even more special event. There will be many activities available for seniors, their guests, and alumnae."

For the first time in a number of years, alumnae and other reunion class guests will be housed on campus in the residence halls. Reunion classes will be housed together in the same residence hall.

Mary Baldwin's first organized children's program for the children of alumnae is also being planned for the weekend. Supervised activities for children will be offered Friday,
